The two-story, hip-roofed house measures three bays across the south-facing facade. This side is covered by a hip-roofed porch with square posts. A rear two-story gable-roofed ell has a one-story porch on its east side. The square house features clipped-gable dormers facing south and east.

The right-hand entrance on the facade is topped by a narrow transom. On the east side, only the right-hand bay is fenestrated. All architraves consist of plain flat boards. A brick stove-flue chimney appears at the north end of the house. Narrow lapped wooden siding covers the house.

An early 20th century gambrel-roofed barn stands north of the house.
